

"MY HAT'S OFF TO YOUR BREAD"

"My hat's off to your bread," said the tax authority, using a long black holder for his cigarette.

"It should be a fascinating business, inventing taxes," chuckled the passenger.

"You say so?" asked the passenger.

"I should get rich," said the tax authority, leaning over his pocket.

"You won't on 'Just the other day' I got world copyright on the second marriage license."

"The what?" asked the passenger.

"Second marriage license," replied the tax authority.

"That's not a service," said the passenger.

"But I am," replied the tax authority, "and I will get ten cents out of every dollar."

"I would work that," was the reply. "Suppose the cost of marriage license is $10.00. Suppose there is $10.00 in the United States, Canada, Mexico and all Central and South America. Think of the opportunities elsewhere. When you get the plan you must admit that you can't understand this plan."

"Let me understand this plan," said the passenger.

"I could easily be married if I didn't pay the tax," said the passenger.

"You're right," replied the tax authority. "They'd still be married of dollars and governments know that."

"It's incredible," breathed the passenger in admiration. "You must have," conceded the tax authority.

"I have," conceded the tax authority.

"The passenger told his pipe again," said the tax authority.

"I'm in the district in that so much," said the tax authority.
